IN 2010, A 53-YEAR-OLD CAREER LIBRARIAN quit her job and left home. She traveled around the world spontaneously, using directions and advice from her readers on her blog as she maneuvered her way from country to country.

She bravely traveled alone for ten months, with one suitcase and a little money, mostly by land and sea, through 30 countries on six continents, met people along the way, and got into a few predicaments. Her journey highlights some of the usual, touristy points of interest and, more often than not, the exotic, out-of-the-way places she'd never heard of.

At the Crossroads is the journal of how Rosemary Dukelow found the ultimate cure for her mid-life crisis. The story is light-hearted, funny, inspiring, and encouraging.

At the Crossroads

One Woman's Solo World Tour
by Rosemary Dukelow

Author • World Traveler • Speaker

Ideal for book clubs, libraries, social events, or book parties.

Rosemary Dukelow has presented many entertaining and informative programs on her travel experiences. Audiences love her honest and engaging speaking style. She is available to speak to your club or organization about travel, writing, blogging, or the adventure of becoming an older woman.

Her presentations include a dazzling slide show of photos of the world seen through Rosemary's eyes, from the mean streets of Bangkok to the glitz of St. Tropez.

Rosemary has many humorous and inspirational travel stories not included in her book. The audience can get advice on the business of getting from one corner of the globe to another with the minimum expense and maximum fun. Questions are encouraged.

"Rosemary's presentation was amazing! We were whisked away to exotic locales, and her insights and adventures kept us entertained. Her journey is one that will inspire you."

—Joyce Nevins, Librarian II

"Rosemary's At the Crossroads, presentation drew one of the largest audiences we've ever had. She entertained with hilarious stories and dispensed truly useful travel advice. She literally stole the show!"

—Blanche, Librarian
